Figure S1: H-reflex measurements before (0:00 min) and after (10:00 and 22:00 min) cuff inflation recorded at regular intervals until it disappeared. These sweeps are from a typical subject, showing how the amplitude of the H-reflex decreases after cuff inflation. The variable M-response is due to different stimulation intensities used when approaching the time of INB.