

EDITORIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

On resigning his academic appointment in the Paterson Institute for Cancer Research for a post in the private sector, Dr Michael Moore will formally relinquish the position of Editor-in-chief in December 1988.

Dr Moore became editor in 1978 and has served the Cancer Research Campaign with distinction through a decade of change and development in which the British Journal of Cancer has come to rank among the foremost oncology journals in the world.

Dr Moore will be succeeded by Dr Peter Twentyman who joins the editorial staff this month in the capacity of Associate editor. From August 15 all new manuscripts should be sent to Dr Twentyman at the following address: Editorial Office, British Journal of Cancer, MRC Clinical Oncology and Radiotherapeutics Unit, Addenbrookes Hospital, Hills Road, Cambridge CB2 2QH, UK.

Authors whose manuscripts are already under review should continue to correspond with the offices of the Editor-in-chief in Manchester or of the Clinical editor in Sutton, as appropriate.
