15th International Cancer Congress
Hamburg
Federal Republic of Germany
August 16 - 22, 1990

The Goals of the Scientific Program

The 15th International Cancer Congress continues the tradition of promoting a comprehensive, multidisciplinary approach to the cancer problem worldwide. Special attention will be given to increasing exchange between basic research and clinical application, as well as between oncologists and other health care professionals in both developed and developing countries.

An estimated 5,000 presentations will be divided into poster sessions, symposia, panel discussions, round table discussions, scientific exhibitions, plenary lectures, special lectures, and the professor sessions. No joint or satellite symposia.

The scientific program will cover all relevant fields of interest at basic research and clinical oncology. Single organ tumors have not been mentioned individually. However, the efficacy, diagnosis, and clinical management will be dealt with in detail. An additional program will provide a full spectrum of topics for cancer nurses, medical and social health care professionals, volunteers, and lay organizations, as well as the general public.

Official Language: All lectures and discussions will be in English only. There will be no simultaneous translation.

The program will be in English and German with simultaneous translation.
