Supplementary Fig. 3. Nebula is mainly found in the soluble mitochondrial fraction. Mitochondria isolated from wild type flies were further subfractionated into the membrane and soluble fractions. Western blots were performed using antibodies against ATP synthase beta subunit (ATPβ), cytochrome c (Cyt C), and cytochrome c oxidase subunit III (COX III). ATPβ and Cyt C were used to mark the mitochondrial soluble fraction and COX III used to mark the membrane fraction.