

FREE LITERATURE

Pharmaceutical Filtration. Pall (East Hills, NY) details a broad range of filter media and other products. Operating specifications, removal ratings, flow and ΔP characteristics, cartridge styles, and configurations are fully detailed, along with schematic diagrams, to help users choose the right filtration system.

Write in 708 on Reader Service Card

Safety First. Safety: A Personal Choice. Available from Curtin Matheson Scientific (Houston, TX), includes safety products for clinical and industrial laboratory use. Also featured are paraphrased OSHA regulations and NCCLS guidelines, and information on obtaining Material Safety data sheets.

Write in 709 on Reader Service Card

Custom Fermentors. Paul Mueller (Springfield, MO) introduces a 12-page brochure with photos of tanks it has designed and descriptions of materials, specialized fabrication, and other options. The company makes equipment including mixing tanks, batch processors, bioreactors, and tanks for sterile solutions, cultures, and RO or DI water storage.

Write in 710 on Reader Service Card

Immunoreagents. A new 40-page technical guide from Biomeda (Foster City, CA) contains sections on immunocytochemistry, automated immunocytochemistry, flow cytometry, immunoochemicals, OEM services, and reagents for molecular biology such as detection kits for in-situ DNA hybridization.

Write in 712 on Reader Service Card

Cleanroom Catalog. Liberty Industries (East Berlin, CT) lists over 40 new products among 1,500 items in its latest publication. Among the innovations is a clean-room washer/dryer that lets personnel maintain their own garments without the use of outside cleaning services.

Write in 705 on Reader Service Card

Capillary Equipment. Waters (Milford, MA) offers a six-page brochure highlighting the capabilities of its Quanta 4000 capillary electrophoresis system. These include automation for unattended operation, high-sensitivity detection, fraction collection, and temperature control.

Write in 706 on Reader Service Card

Electrophoresis Gels. Over 100 types of pre-cast gels and a gel selection guide are offered in Novex's (San Diego, CA) 1990 catalog. It also lists the company's electrophoresis hardware and supplies, such as the Mini-Cell unit with a self-prompting programmable power supply.

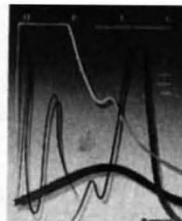

Write in 707 on Reader Service Card

Biosoftware. With over 30 programs priced from $10-300, PC Software for Biotechnology and Biochemistry, Spring 1990 from BioCode (Division of Coral Software, San Diego, CA) provides PC methods for picking the best DNA probes and primers, drawing restriction maps, making databases of DNA clones, determining nucleic acid and protein homologies, optimizing ligations, drawing molecular models, and more.

Write in 711 on Reader Service Card

Advanced HPLC. Hitachi Instruments (Danbury, CT) presents a full-color brochure emphasizing the technical aspects of its chromatography components. A fold-out section illustrates pump operation; also described are an autosampler, a robotic sample preparation system, detectors, software, and accessories.

Write in 701 on Reader Service Card

Capillary Applications. Data sheet DS-740A from Beckman Instruments (Fullerton, CA) lists over 200 references published through September 1989 on capillary electrophoresis. This 16-page bibliography covers separation and analysis of proteins, peptides, drugs, amino acid derivatives, and nucleic acid fragments and components.

Write in 702 on Reader Service Card

Autosampler Guide. Chromacol (Trumbull, CT) announces the publication of a 36-page chromatography autosampler catalog. In addition to sample-handling products, it provides a compatibility chart cross-referencing vial sizes for all popular autosamplers, and a solvent/seal suitability chart detailing over 30 solvents and 16 seals.

Write in 703 on Reader Service Card

For Rent. A 16-page directory of instruments available for immediate rental, with option to buy, comes from U.S. Analytical Instruments (San Carlos, CA). Included are all types of chromatographs, spectrophotometers, and data systems from major manufacturers.

Write in 704 on Reader Service Card