

A PROFESSIONAL'S GUIDE TO MOUTHWASH

The Oral Health Foundation has partnered with Johnson & Johnson, the makers of LISTERINE, to create and publish The Dental Professional's Guide to Mouthwash Use.

The new six-page guide has been created as a plaque management tool for you to help patients take control of their own oral health at home.

The booklet covers the role of mouthwash as part of the daily oral health routine, as well as recommendations for mouthwash use based on the latest available evidence.

According to recent research by the Oral Health Foundation, almost half (49%) of the survey participants do not use mouthwash regularly while more than one in three (36%) never use it.

The toolkit contains advice about changing patient behaviour to increase their probability of adopting daily mouthwash use at home. It also includes information about the different types of mouthwash available and its role within plaque management.

Mouthwash Use can be downloaded from the charity's website: <https://www.dentalhealth.org/the-dental-professionals-guide-to-mouthwash-use>.

BESPOKE ADVICE ON AIR PURIFICATION

Plain Air advises a range of businesses on keeping their premises COVID-19 secure. They provide an independent advice service so that dentists can obtain their preferred air purification solution quickly, with no disruption to services.

According to Plain Air, the cost of installing suitable equipment is often less than the fees earned in a single day, and being able to close the windows, reduce heating costs and keep the temperature comfortable in the practice is especially valuable.

Plain Air has dedicated its time to understanding everything about air pollution and COVID, and know that only a minority of products come close to meeting their advertised specifications. Plain Air only recommends products that it know will do the job and will continue to do so for years to come. For more information visit <https://www.plainair.co.uk/>.
