

Conservative restorations that are made to last

Patients who choose restorative treatment want it to last. They also want it delivered with materials that facilitate minimal invasion to their healthy dentition, to avoid any compromise to the other teeth.

COLTENE's restorative materials can be used to deliver conservative restorations of excellence. They include all-round, great value options, such as BRILLIANT EverGlow and the new BRILLIANT Compoener, for efficient treatment chairside.

COLTENE's materials are market-leading because they handle well, the aesthetics are stunning, and they exhibit great versatility in a number of situations.

To find out why you should switch, browse the entire range online, then call COLTENE.

What does the future of dentistry look like?

Dentally is undertaking its annual 'State of Dentistry' survey and is asking as many dental practitioners, practice owners, managers and all those who work in the profession to take part.

In a year of unprecedented and challenging times that have changed the way we live and work, the world of dentistry has had to transform the way it operates. This survey looks to assess how our industry is responding to the pressures that COVID-19 has created. Dentally is keen to understand how practitioners and practices are coping with the changing demands and hear their thoughts on what the future may look like.

Your views really do count; you are all critical to the health of the dental industry, upholding standards and excellence in the profession, creating jobs, investment and innovation that will drive the sector forward.

To take part, simply visit <https://www.surveymonkey.co.uk/r/stateofdentistry2020>.

As a thank you for your participation you will be entered into a prize draw. The first completed survey chosen at random will receive a £100 Amazon voucher (no cash alternative and non-transferable). The closing date is 11 December 2020.
