Improved scanning of shiny telescopic prostheses

In digital dentistry, transparent and shiny surfaces have to be matted for scanning purposes. Now there is a new scanning spray, SCANTIST 3D, which gives surfaces a fine, homogeneous matt coating. The spray coating does not have to be removed after scanning because the spray completely evaporates. In addition, SCANTIST 3D is free of pigments such as harmful titanium dioxide.

Many conventional sprays contain pigments and titanium dioxide, which are said to have carcinogenic effects.

It cannot be completely avoided that the staff may also be exposed to the spray mist when the objects are being treated.

Conventional sprays adhere stubbornly to surfaces and are very difficult to remove. This is time-consuming and detrimental to hygiene. The coating can never be completely removed; a residue will always remain on the objects and the surroundings.

In addition, conventional sprays are often very coarse, which easily leads to an uneven spray coating. The actual surface data cannot be recorded correctly, which affects the accuracy of fit of the dental prostheses.

SCANTIST 3D scanning spray has been around since 2021. It can be applied in a very thin and even layer, meaning that the scanners capture accurate surface data.

Moreover, SCANTIST 3D adheres to all surfaces and is dry to the touch, making it particularly easy to use. What is special about the spray is that it evaporates by itself, thus completely eliminating the need for costly and time-consuming cleaning.

An entire work step is saved. Since the spray coating completely evaporates after approximately 20 minutes, the whole process is very hygienic.

Simple, repeatable success

3M Oral Care and StyleItaliano have joined forces for two virtual, hands-on sessions – Essential Lines and Essential Shape. Hosted by Jordi Manuata and Giuseppe Chiodera, these courses are designed to teach professionals how to create outstanding anterior and posterior composite restorations using trusted products from 3M Oral Care.

When professionals sign up to either or both courses, they will receive a practice kit containing all of the 3M Oral Care products they need to perform the techniques detailed in the course training.

Buying one or both courses also gives professionals access to on-demand training as well as the opportunity to sign into live events with Q&A sessions where they can have any queries resolved.

Essential Lines and Essential Shape are both priced at €249. Professionals who sign up to both courses can enjoy a discounted rate of just €380 for the pair!
