

For superior freshness and protection

The Breath Co team were at this year's British Dental Conference & Dentistry Show Birmingham (BDCDS) to showcase their range of oral rinses – did you manage to stop by?

Many people experience bad breath and turn to mouthwash to help them combat unpleasant odour. By recommending The Breath Co oral rinses to your patients, they can experience a refreshingly different solution. Dentist-formulated, these oral rinses are alcohol-free, so no unpleasant afterburn. For 12 hours after use, the natural balance of the mouth is supported, not stripped, for superior freshness and protection.

A confident patient is a happy one, while a clean mouth is a healthy one – recommend The Breath Co to your patients and help them enjoy both.

If you missed The Breath Co at the show, please do get in touch should you have any questions. Visit the website today for more.

Dyslexia and clinical note taking

During a dental examination, it can be incredibly helpful for your dental nurse to assist you in clinical note taking, helping you to save time and ensure your notes are accurate and contemporaneous. However, should your dental nurse be dyslexic, this may be challenging – with uncertainty about how to spell certain words.

With Kiroku, clinical note taking is simple. The digital note taking platform prompts the inclusion of relevant information, making it simple for you and your dental nurses to easily click the appropriate option, and include it in the notes. Not only does this help to avoid any mistakes, misunderstanding, or worry, but it also helps to make note taking up to 60% faster than before.

Dental technology provider collaborates with charity

UK provider of healthcare operations software, Agilio Software has announced it is partnering with the charity Dentaaid, supporting their staff across the UK with free access to Agilio's leading digital solutions iComply, iLearn and iTeam.

Established in 1996, Dentaaid supports under-served communities across the UK and overseas by offering them free access to dental care. Through its volunteers, the charity travels up and down the country using its fleet of mobile units to provide free, pain-relieving dental treatments, preventive and restorative care, and oral health advice to vulnerable groups such as people experiencing homelessness, cancer patients, abuse survivors, and asylum seekers.

The collaboration between the charity and the dental technology provider began in spring 2022, with Agilio initially donating free subscriptions to their market-leading compliance platform, iComply, and HR and people management solution, iTeam. Seeing the impact their partnership has on disadvantaged communities, Agilio subsequently agreed to provide further support and expand the partnership by granting access to their Enhanced CPD platform, iLearn, this year.

CEO of Dentaaid, Andy Evans, said: 'We are delighted to be further strengthening our

Outstanding dental solutions

Delegates were able to browse 3M Oral Care products at the British Dental Conference & Dentistry Show (BDCDS) 2023. The ethos of 3M is simplicity – the ability to provide consistently beautiful and long-lasting outcomes, in as few steps as possible (but never compromising on quality).

Solutions included the award-winning Imprint 4 VPS Impression Material from 3M, RelyX Universal Resin Cement from 3M and Scotchbond Universal Plus Adhesive from 3M. These solutions are ideal additions to any clinician's workflow, providing predictability, reliability and high quality when you need it.
