

<https://doi.org/10.1057/s41599-023-01626-w>

OPEN

Correction: Political instability patterns are obscured by conflict dataset scope conditions, sources, and coding choices

Clionadh Raleigh , Roudabeh Kishi  & Andrew Linke

Correction to: Humanities and Social Sciences Communications <https://doi.org/10.1057/s41599-023-01559-4>, published online 25 February 2023.

During the typesetting process an incorrect competing interests statement was introduced into the paper by the publishing staff, despite the authors having provided a full statement in their final accepted draft. The authors' correct statement has now been corrected. It reads as follows:

Competing interests

The authors declare that they created one of the datasets under consideration. They note that ACLED is a 501c(3) designated non-profit NGO. None of the authors profit from this or other articles concerning data comparisons.

Published online: 21 March 2023

Open Access This article is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License, which permits use, sharing, adaptation, distribution and reproduction in any medium or format, as long as you give appropriate credit to the original author(s) and the source, provide a link to the Creative Commons license, and indicate if changes were made. The images or other third party material in this article are included in the article's Creative Commons license, unless indicated otherwise in a credit line to the material. If material is not included in the article's Creative Commons license and your intended use is not permitted by statutory regulation or exceeds the permitted use, you will need to obtain permission directly from the copyright holder. To view a copy of this license, visit <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>.

© The Author(s) 2023