WORKPLACE PENSIONS ARE COMING... ACT NOW!

After the announcement of the Government initiative to increase private retirement savings within the UK, Frank Taylor & Associates introduces its new low cost workplace pensions scheme.

Workplace pensions are quickly becoming the biggest topic that UK businesses are facing and as a practice owner and employer you have a legal requirement to provide and contribute to a scheme for all eligible staff working within your business. And, with big fines for non-compliance, it is vital you have a plan of action.

Taking some initial steps now will certainly help you along the way. For example:

- Make sure you know your 'staging date' – this is the date on which workplace pensions go live for your business
- Determine which employees

in your practice are eligible to join the scheme

- Benefit from cost savings by putting plans in place early
- Start to tell your staff as much as you can beforehand
- Make sure your systems/processes are in place
- Get the right advice.

Many employers assume this is all being managed by their accountant or payroll provider; however, our experience shows this isn't the case so you need to ACT now as you are the one legally responsible to implement a scheme.

If you are unsure where you stand and want to find out more about workplace pensions and the efficient, low cost solution available via Frank Taylor & Associates, call 0330 088 11 56 or visit www.ft-associates.com.

ENDO UPDATE

There have been tremendous advancements in technologies which enable us as a profession to provide effective and efficient endodontic treatment for patients which help provide optimal clinical outcomes.

CBCT technology has been a game changer. It means we can tell exactly how many canals are present, where exactly they are located and the length of each canal without intervention. Knowledge is key in endo and once you learn strategies for overcoming the obstacles you face in endodontics, you will actually really start to enjoy the art of endodontics.

Endodonticseminars.co.uk have created a bespoke course for dentists wishing to update their skills. The first two hours are spent discussing issues in practice. This is an open participant-led discussion focusing on what you want to learn. The course then works on extracted teeth under microscopic visualisation. Course participants can get a CBCT scan of the tooth and practise what you want to learn in small groups.

The most popular requests are help in:

- Finding canals
- Maintaining working length
- Dynamic irrigation and heated obturation systems
- Independent advice on rotary or reciprocating NiTi systems.

A new endodontic microsurgery course will also start in January. For more information see www.endodonticseminars.co.uk.
