

Comment

Supplementary information to:

Indigenous youth must be at the forefront of climate diplomacy

A Comment published in Nature 620, 273–276 (2023)

<https://doi.org/10.1038/d41586-023-02480-1>

Temitope Olawunmi Sogbanmu, Heather Sauyaq Jean Gordon, Lahcen El Youssfi, Fridah Dermmilla Obare, Seira Duncan, Marion Hicks, Khadeejah Ibraheem Bello, Faris Ridzuan & Adeyemi Oladapo Aremu

List of co-signatories

Chinwoke Clara Ifeanyi-Obi, Department of Agricultural Extension and Development Studies, University of Port Harcourt, Rivers State, Nigeria.

Tanyaradzwa Amanda Mawoyo, Department of Irrigation, Zimbabwe.

Sandrine Djakoure, Laboratory of Matter Sciences, Environment and Solar Energy (LASMES), Félix Houphouët-Boigny University, Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire.

Wan Faizah Che Din, Amanah Lestari Alam-Malaysia at Bank Pembangunan Malaysia Berhad.

Abdul Hamid Zakri, International Institute of Science Diplomacy and Sustainability, UCSI University, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Pfokrelo Kapesa, Department of Political Science, University of Allahabad, Prayagraj, UP, India- 211002.

Acknowledgements

We acknowledge the teachings and guidance from both our ancestors and Elders in our Indigenous communities who shaped who we are today, what we have learned from science diplomacy, and others in the Global Indigenous Youth Summit on Climate Change (GIYSCC) Global Steering Committee for shaping this Comment. We also acknowledge AINU Elder (Yoko Abe), Yoshinori Hashida and Chuuetsu Sato for their time. We particularly thank Professor Paul Arthur Berkman at the Science Diplomacy Center™ for inspiring and coordinating the GIYSCC. T.O.S. acknowledges the International Network for Government Science Advice (INGSA) Africa Chapter for the Science Advice Skills Development Program (SASDP) of which she is a Fellow and through which the GIYSCC was initiated with Professor Berkman. Springer Nature is acknowledged for providing financial support as a sponsor of the GIYSCC and the United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) is acknowledged for championing the implementation of the GIYSCC.